DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims 1-39 are pending in this application.
2. Examiner acknowledges receipt of Applicant's information disclosure statements, received 11 June 2001, with accompanying reference copies, which have been taken into consideration for this Office action.
3. Claims 1-8 and 17-39 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which Applicant regards as the invention.

In claims 1 and 24, the method is not clearly related to the environment of the preamble, since it is unclear as to what is performing any of these steps. This presents ambiguity with regard to metes and bounds of such a claim, since the steps of the method could possibly be embodied in an unlimited number of ways. This indefiniteness persists through each of the dependent claims.

Further in claim 1, it is unclear how the "at least one NC program" can be transferred "across the WAN from the at least one central processing element," when the central processing element has previously been claimed only as being "notified" of the selected NC program. Hence, there is no clear antecedence for the central processing element having the NC program, in order to be able to transfer it.

In claims 17-23 and 32-39, the claim language "is adapted to" is vague and indefinite, since it does not positively recite functionality.

4. Applicant is advised that should claims 6, 17 and 21 be found allowable, claims 25, 34 and (respectively) will be objected to under 37 CFR §1.75 as being a substantial duplicate thereof. When two claims in an application are duplicates or else are so close in content that they both cover the same thing, despite a slight difference in wording, it is proper after allowing one claim to object to the other as being a substantial duplicate of the allowed claim. See MPEP §706.03(k).

5. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. §102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by Applicant for a patent.

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by Applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by Applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

6. Claims 1-3, 6, 8-11, 15-18, 21, 23-27, 31-35 and 39 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. §102(b) as being clearly anticipated by Makino et al. (U.S. Patent No. 5,266,878), which discloses a “CNC apparatus for controlling a plurality of machines,” wherein “a main CPU unit and a plurality of CNC units [are] provided on a one-to-one correspondence with machine tools ... to modify the mode of machine tool control ... a new system program is down-loaded through the RAM of the main CPU unit into the CPU for the CNC unit” (the abstract). Also, see at least, col. 1, line 64 - col. 3, line 37; col. 5, line 51 - col. 6, line 32; and col. 1, lines 15-25, wherein the well-known use of networks is disclosed). As per the “protocol” and “format” language of the claims, all computer communication inherently involves a predetermined protocol and/or format, else the communicating computers would not be able to “understand” each other.

7. Claims 1-6, 8-13, 15-21, 23-29, 31-37 and 39 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. §102(a) as being clearly anticipated by Takizawa et al. (U.S. Patent No. 6,145,022), which discloses an injection molding system utilizing a “program control section including a program file section that stores a plurality of different programs in the form of files, and a program transfer section that selects a computer program from the program file section and transfers the selected computer program to the controller” of a machine (the abstract). Also, see at least, col. 2, lines 3-24; col. 2, line 61 - col. 3, line 28, wherein the use of servers over a network are disclosed). As per the “protocol” and “format” language of the claims, all computer communication inherently involves a predetermined protocol and/or format, else the communicating computers would not be able to "understand" each other.

8. Claims 1-39 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. §102(e) as being clearly anticipated by Sevcik et al. (U.S. Patent No. 6,470,377), which teaches "a networked system combines multiple workstations, storage devices and file handlers with multiple computer numerical controls," utilizing a "standard process-to-process communication protocol," wherein "a file management system ... allows the activation and execution of part program operations at a computer numerical control on files accessed through standard open networks" (the abstract). Also, see at least, col. 2, line 64 - col. 3, line 44; col. 4, lines 20-31; col. 4, line 51 - col. 5, line 25; col. 5, line 57 - col. 6, line 5).
